MAARIE HUTANA

*Māori Engagement Manager,
Advance Care Planning | Tumu kaupapa Māori, whakamahere tauwhiro
Te Tāhū Hauora Health Quality & Safety Commission*

Maarie is passionate about social justice. As a nurse, she focused on supporting whānau Māori affected by cancer, having the great privilege of working as part of a team to address systemic barriers for improved health outcomes for Māori. Maarie was first attracted to advance care planning due to its emphasis on empowering people in their healthcare and preparing them for future decision-making.

Advance care planning encourages and cultivates meaningful conversations about future healthcare wishes among whānau, friends, and healthcare teams. At the centre of these discussions is what matters most to people—their personal tikanga.

Maarie will guide us through advance care planning in terms of Māori mana motuhake (self-determination) and how these important conversations prepare whānau for healthcare encounters and strengthen their capacity to actively participate in their healthcare decision-making.
